The intention of the Congress is to initiate a discussion on the meaning and consequences of different views of the human being in schools and in higher education. Empirically-oriented research will be presented alongside theoretical and conceptual approaches. In a broad range of areas including the economization of educational systems, the current debates about inclusion, the role of the arts in education and the development of learning theories and concepts, the potential implications of the understanding of the human being and the supporting scientific paradigms will be open to examination and discourse.
